BRIDGES.

Regular meeting night of the Ancient Order United Workmen.

Rock River Encampment No. 3, I. O. O. F., occupy Odd Fellows' hall this evening.

The Good Templars assemble in their hall in the Court street M. E. block this evening.

On Sunday morning Rev. Dr. M. G. Hodge will preach to the children in the Congregational church, the day being observed as children's day.

A tremendous Blaine sentiment was manifested on our streets to-day, as each successive bulletin was read, and it demonstrates that the "plumed knight" has a tremendous following, who will not be satisfied until they see him in the White House. Vox populi.

The Leon & Cushman minstrel troupe appeared in the opera house last evening, and were greeted by a very fair audience, who were highly delighted with the performance, some of which was very clever and amusing, especially that of "Leon."

The arrangements for securing the bulletins have been complete, and much credit is due the Western Union Telegraph company and the Associated Press. Also to Mr. M. W. Hamblin, the manager, of the telegraph office in this city, who has taken considerable extra pains to supply the bulletins to the papers as soon as received.

The Rockford Register: Twenty-four saloons in Rockford for the present year, and the city $14,400 ahead, and the question is still unsolved whether that sum compensates for all the attending evils.—"Now comes the beauty of the 'boozing business,'" said Marshall Sully this morning as he sat down to copy 1,225 names of tough-nots, taste-nots on the new black lists.

Married—at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Louis D. Ebert, Alma Center, Wisconsin, June 4th, 1884, by Rev. E. Bradford, Mr. John K. Wilson, of Dakota, and Miss Henrietta M. Ebert, of Alma. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson have gone to their home in Dakota. Mr. Wilson was formerly connected with the institution for the blind, in this city, and resided here some fourteen years.

Madison Journal: Not a few complaints come in from the surrounding country of the presence of a gang of oil-tongued lightning-rod swindlers who have succeeded in several localities in gaining, by knavish practices, the signatures of farmers to notes for various sums of money. Farmers should be on the alert and have no dealings with them whatever, as their sole object is to extort money from the rightful owners, without giving anything like an equivalent for it in the form of lightning rods.

In this week's issue of The Current, (June 7), John Burroughs presents the second installment of his charming papers entitled "Country Thoughts and Days," which are regarded as among the most interesting work that has been done by this writer; Chapter VII of "The Grinnings," the Pittsburgh story, by E. G. Cutler, is published; C. W. Waite, an ex-journalist of repute, and for a long time the Washington and war correspondent ("Waldo") of the Chicago Tribune and Missouri Democrat, contributes a paper of national interest entitled, "The Anti-Practical Lincoln," which presents the true Lincoln, not a rail-splitter and retailer of questionable jokes, but as one who was inherently great, and at last the possessor of a just fame, "he had for a generation, been slowly, deliberately, studiously, earnestly building." Mr. G. C. Cochran, one of the editors of the Current, has a paper, "The University Idea," which presents a more hopeful view of American progress toward genuine university education; James M. Kerr, editor of the Columbus (O.) Law Journal, discusses "The Road of India," an entertaining short story entitled "A Colorado Scapegoat," is from the pen of John S. Judson, in the "Celebrated Personages of France" series, by Lucy H. Hooper; a most entertaining sketch is given of Prince Jerome Napoleon, Duke of Nemours, in his "Southern Silhouettes," given in No. XXV, a quaint and tender picture of "The Old Cemetery," P. L. Jarvis resumes his "Peeps Through English Casements," and his painted in No. XIII of the series, a warm and glowing picture of an old English "Wayside Inn," in a sparkling paper entitled "A Human Butterfly," Elizabeth Cummings discusses the life and character of La Fontaine, the French fabulist, of which Voltaire has written "the simple of men, but adorable in his way," while chapter XXX of "The Wonderful City" is given.

The poems of the number comprise "Birds Coups," by Edgar W. Williams; "Hymn to Apollo," by Charles J. O'Malley; "Decorative Day," by Percy W. Blackmer; "When Love is Lost," by Lee C. Hardy; "The Four-Leaf Clover," by J. M. Sullivan; and "One Day," by Julia H. Rayner.

THE ELECTIONS.

The Seventh Annual Meeting of the Wisconsin State Elective Association.

The Wisconsin State Elective Association was convened Wednesday, June 4th, 1884, at the Temple of Honor hall, in this city, at two o'clock p. m. The meeting was called to order by the president, George C. O'Neil, of Clinton, and Dr. W. W. Barber, of Watertown, treasurer. The regular routine of business was carried out satisfactorily to all participating. The first order of business being the receiving of candidates for admission to the society. Several candidates presented themselves to the board of censors, a majority of whom were favorably reported upon and were duly elected to membership.

The president then delivered his annual address, which was an able and scholarly presentation of the status of the society. He spoke of the objects of the association and the advancement of Elective medicine, concluding by congratulating the society upon its success, and prospects of future prosperity.

The next proceeding was the reports of officers. The secretary reported the organization to be on a firm basis, having a higher representation than was ever known to the association.

The reception of papers was next taken up, and the first one read was by J. Howard, M. D., and was entitled "What it costs to be an Elective." The subject was skillfully handled by the speaker, and showed a considerable amount of study and research.

The next paper read was by H. Junger, M. D., subject, "Signs and symptoms of diseases." This paper drew out very able discussions from which much valuable information was gleaned. At this point Dr. R. H. Statton, presented an interesting clinic, it being a case of progressive paralysis, the examination and discussion of which was quite lengthy.

Another paper was then presented by J. E. Birkhauser, M. D., of Milwaukee. The subject was, Medical Education.

The doctor's paper was one of the most interesting of the session and showed that he thoroughly understood what he was talking about. He favored a higher order of education than is generally met in the professional man, and recommended the examination of applicants to the title of M. D. to be placed in the hands of the faculty of the medical college from which he or she graduated; claiming that the teacher only can be capable of judging of a student's medical education. After Dr. Birkhauser's address an adjournment was taken until 7:15 P. M.

EVENING SESSION.—The meeting was called to order by the president at 7:15 p. m., after which very able papers were read and discussed. The following gentlemen during the evening addressed the meeting: R. H. Statton, M. D., Lima, subject "Protective Medical Legislation;" Prof. R. K. Whitford, M. D., Elgin, "Temperaments Physiologically considered;" S. S. Judd, M. D., of this city, subject, "Necessity of a State Association;" F. A. Barber, M. D., Watertown, subject, "Legal Status of our State Society;" C. G. Edson, M. D., Centralia, subject, "Why I came to the convention." After these the merits of many new remedies were discussed and several peculiar and interesting cases of practice were presented and different modes of treatment given. A few general remarks being concluded the next order of business was the election of officers for the ensuing year. This resulted as follows:

President, H. B. Ladin, M. D., La Crosse.

Vice President, O. C. Harris, M. D., Geneseo.

Secretary, Y. S. Troyer, M. D., Mendota.

Treasurer, S. S. Judd, M. D., Janesville.

Board of Censors, S. S. Judd, M. D., J. E. Birkhauser, M. D., Geo. C. O'Neil, M. D., R. H. Statton, M. D., C. G. Edson, M. D.

Delegates to the national convention of Electives at Cincinnati were appointed as follows: Drs. S. S. Judd, Miller, Coyne, Troyer, Bagley, Edson, Ladin, Dale and Thurston.

Letters of regret were read from several physicians throughout the state who were necessarily prevented from attending the convention. Resolutions were passed thanking the U. S. W. and M. & St. P. R. R. companies for their kindness in granting members reduced rates to come to and from the meeting. Dr. S. S. Judd for his kindness and hospitality shown them while here, and the Temple of Honor for the privilege of using their hall for convention purposes.

The meeting was adjourned at 11 p. m. to meet June 4th, 1885, at Kilbourn City.

This session has been one of the most interesting and pleasant known to the organization, and from the large representation shows that Elective medicine is far from being a dead letter.
